HOW THEY LIVE AT CAMP MEETINGS.

METHODIST EXERCISES

A Methodist camp meeting has been in progress at Glen Cove, on Long Island, since Sunday last. Our reporter paid the place a visit yesterday.

In the first place, as to the manner of getting to Glen Cove, every one, desiring to go there from New-York, should be advised to go by boat instead of by the Long Island Railroad, if he has any special regard for his own physical comfort. By the latter route it will cost spend 29 minutes and Sc. in reaching Hunter's Point from the foot of James-st.: 18 hours and 65c, from Munter's Point to Glen Head-a lonely, beaven-forsaken dingle in the midst of a musketo populated forest-over the roughest, dustiest road that ever afflicted a traveler's evesight and digestive organs; and 50c. for a preas perch on the rickety top of a miserable stage which slinks along to Glen Cove, a distance of hree miles, at a pace in contrast with which the tertoise is a winged steed and the calumniated snail a bounding cannon ball. By the boat, a pleasant sail of between two and three hours will land the passenger within a few rods of the foot of the hill, upon the summit of which the camp is

Approaching the camp the wisitor is met by objects usually incident to gatherings of this description-wagons, barouches, buggles and wehicles of every kind, some still occupied by the owners as about the coolest places they can find, with the horses feeding at the tail-board or tethered in the grove

The encampment itself consists of a group of about 60 tents, arranged in a rather regular hollow square of about two acres, in the center of which is erected the principal preaching stand, facing rough board seats, which will seat a thousand or two of spectators, and which the gradually rising ground throws into successive stone, after the manner of a theater parquette.

THE EXERCISES.

A regular routine of morning, afternoon and evening exercises is purened. The Methodists are a very sincere people, and probably do a great deal of praying round, but it would seem to an outsider at a camp meeting that they would get enough devotion to last them for several months. It has been said that the chameleon lives on air; here, with equal truth, the Mathodist lives on air; here, with equal truth, the to last them for several months. It has been said that

The naval apprentice school ship Savannah has been ordered to proceed to Annapolis instead of New-London. There are probably many reasons for the change, but we believe that the Department sends her there so that the people in that section may have an opportunity at less expense to place their boys on board of a school ship. One of the school ships placed near the Naval Academy will serve to get up a spirit of emulation between the midshipmen and apprentices.

The utmost enthusiasm prevailed among the invited guests in regard to Mexico, the Mouroe Doctrine and its enforcement. The following were some of the toasts: "The Republic of Mexico." "President Juarez." "Gen, Ortega." "The President and Gen, Grant—the former the greatest Statesman, the latter the greatest General of this or any other country." "The integrity of the Mexican Republic." Col. Hillyer having been loudly called for responded in a very cloquent speech, in which he said that the attempt to crush out the liberties of the Mexicans was a blow aimed at the United States, and as such this country was bound to notice it. That it was almost certain President Johnson had already notified the French Government that it must withdraw its troops, and in conclusion read a brief extract from a letter from Gen.
